The pain that sometimes strikes a man at the most inopportune moment is due to indigestion. It may come in the midst of a feast and make a dinner a mockery. It is a reminder that he may not eat what he chooses, nor when he chooses. He is a slave to the weakness of his stomach. A man's health and strength depend upon what he gets out of his food. This depends on his digestion. Remove the obstruction by taking Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are a positive cure for constipation and its attendant ills—headaches, sour stomach, flatulence, dizziness, biliousness and "heartburn." The "Pellets are very gentle in their action. They simply assist nature. They give no violent wrench to the system. They cause no pain or griping.

GREAT MEN'S MOTHERS.

History Records Them to Have Had Fine, Strong Natures.

"It is an interesting historical fact that nearly every man of great deeds who also possessed a great character had a mother of strong, fine nature, with whom in boyhood and early manhood he dwelt in close sympathy even when at a distance from her," writes Frances B. Evans, in the October Ladies' Home Journal. "Probably the most disagreeable man socially of all celebrated men was poor Thomas Carlyle, whose disposition was nervous, melancholy and grumpy, but in the midst of his laborious life and severe mental industry he could always find time to write affectionate letters to his mother, full of respect, tenderness and consideration he never seemed to feel for much greater personages. If a mother's hand holds the leading-strings of a man's life, he will hold himself as securely as did Anthony Hope's Prisoner of Zenda, with his motto: 'The King can do no wrong.'"

If the $200,000,000 in gold which President McKinley holds cornered in his "war chest" were in circulation, wheat might have some chance to get back to a dollar instead of keeping down towards four cents.—Mississippi Valley Democrat.

Effects of Drinking Tea.

"Moderation is the best temperance; temperance is the best diet, and diet is the best doctor," says an old New York physician, "and some authorities insist that tea is a most potent destroyer of the digestive organs, while others insist that it is comparatively harmless if taken in moderation, and that it is only in exceptional cases that it has this injurious effect. But the majority of physicians and scientists are unanimous in conceding that the action of tea, if used habitually in large quantities, is more or less injurious to the nervous system, for the reason, which is the organic basis of tea, is a potent nerve and many can not use it without injury to themselves. Numbers of people are dyspeptic and nervous from the continued use of tea."

Dr. Edward Smith, of Indiana, says: "In reference to nutrition, tea increases it, since it promotes the transformation of food, without supplying nutriment, and increases the loss of heat without supplying food," therefore, he thinks, tea should only be taken after a full meal. There is no doubt that the action of tea is stimulating in its effect. It increases the action of the heart and the arteries, and furnishes a transient increase of vital energy; but it is not nutritive, and the very fact that among the poorer classes the addition of a cup of tea to an otherwise meager diet, makes it palatable is misleading, for while it allows one to live on less food for a time, the result, sooner or later, must be injurious."

Sixteen to One or Bust.

The immense increase in the productive power of machinery would be accompanied by a corresponding increase in the comfort of the people, but for two things:

- (1) Combinations to shut down factories and control supply.
- (2) Combinations to restrict the supply of money.

If the supply of money increased as does the productive capacity of machinery, prices would advance in spite of the great increase in production. There could be no such thing as "overproduction" as long as want exists in the world.

But with gold cornered and held out of circulation; with silver demonetized, and trusts controlling our factories, we will go from one period of depression to another.

Free coinage is an absolute necessity to business. Sixteen to One or Bust is a condition and not a theory.—Mississippi Valley Democrat and Journal of Agriculture.

Trouble and Plenty of It.

It is to be hoped that the good sense of the American people will assert itself and be influential in requiring our peace commissions to insist on nothing but a cooling station in the Philippines. There was never any excuse for the conquest of Porto Rico. It means the addition to the American people of a million of a mixed race which in language, religion, business morality, habits and peculiarities are so unlike the American people that none of them have voluntarily become American citizens. It is altogether likely if the expansionists are able to carry out their plans, that the easiest thing to have at a big expense will be trouble and plenty of it.—Warsaw (Mo.) Enterprise.

Wagner's Exaltation of Women.

No post ever lived who exalted woman as Wagner does in almost every one of his dramas. The purity of a spotless female soul was for him one of the great powers of Nature. What God's angel could not accomplish—the rescue of "The Flying Dutchman" out of Satan's clutches—"Senta," the virgin, achieves by the sacrifice of her life. "Elizabeth" dies in order to kneel at God's very throne and there pray for "Tannhauser," whom the Pope himself had not dared to absolve from eternal perdition. "Brunhilde" is, there can be little doubt, the sublimest female character that was ever put on the stage. And what the poet dreamed of, the man sought for in real life.—October Ladies' Home Journal.

GIRLS AS YOUNG

MEN'S ENEMIES.

How They Puncture Holes in a Young Man's Business Prospects.

Girls are by far too apt to thoughtlessly punch holes in the business prospects of the young men of their acquaintance," writes Edward Bok in the October Ladies' Home Journal. "They work this mischief in various ways. They consider it 'great fun' to step to a telephone, for example, and 'ring up' some young man while he is at his office, only to send him some unnecessary message or indulge in some flippant talk. They are forgetful of the fact that what may be rare sport at their end of the line may cause serious embarrassment or worse to the young man at the other end. Even if the young man enjoys it, his employer does not. Sending unnecessary or even fancied necessary notes to young men at their offices during business hours is another favorite 'pastime' of girls. Sometimes the 'fun' is carried further by meeting a young man at his luncheon hour, or by even calling at his office. Again, even a more dangerous element is introduced by girls urging young men to leave their offices before closing of business, some game or to a train. "The danger in these acts is not in themselves, but in the injurious distractions which they mean. Business hours, though doubtless they seem inexplicably long to girls, are, in reality, all too short for the accomplishment of things necessary to a young man's success. Hence every moment when he is at business should be precious to him, and it is slightly precious to the right sort of a young man. His mind should be focused on the problems before him, which mean either his success or his failure."

Gen. Greeley's Rescue by Schley.

Admiral Schley won the nation's applause some fifteen years ago, when, as a Captain in the United States Navy, he led a relief party successfully to the rescue of General A. W. Greeley and the few survivors of his band of Arctic explorers. General Greeley has at last consented to tell the story of his terrible winter in the frozen North, and his article appears in the October Ladies' Home Journal. It is a remarkable paper, valuable, besides being a record of the Arctic's darkest tragedy, in showing the heroism and abiding faith of American soldiers when brought face to face with death.

Collegiate

School.

NEXT SESSION OPENS SEPTEMBER 5, 1898.

Thorough instruction in all Common School branches, Latin, Greek, German, French, Elocution and Music. We maintain in this school kind but firm discipline.

Each pupil receives personal attention from the Principal. The Principal was educated at Centre and Georgetown Colleges, and has had long experience in his profession. Some children never get an education because they are kept in low grade common schools during the most critical years of life.

We invite most critical investigation of character, qualifications and ability to control and to impart instruction.

This school is not a makeshift. The Principal is a professional teacher, and so does not teach simply to supplement salary in some other calling.

This is a permanent institution. Students who complete course of instruction admitted without examination to leading colleges of Kentucky. Limited number of girls admitted as boarders in family of Principal.

You're starting, my boy, on life's journey. Along the grand highway of life, you'll meet with a thousand temptations—

Each city with evil is rife. This world is a stage of excitement, There's danger wherever you go. But if you are tempted in weakness, Have courage, my boy, to say No!

The bright ruby wine may be offered, No matter how tempting it be, From poison that stings like an adder, My boy, have the courage to flee. The billiard saloons are inviting, Decked out in their tinsel and show, If you should be tempted to enter, Think twice, then stoutly say No!

In courage alone lies your safety, When you the long journey begin, Your trust in a Heavenly Father Will keep you unspotted from sin. Temptations will go on increasing, As streams from a rivulet flow, But if you'd be true to your manhood, Have courage, my boy, to say No!

Severe Suffering

Curious Case of Internal Ulcerated
Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla—Able to Work for the First Time in Four Years.

My husband was taken with severe internal ulcerated piles. He was once apparently cured but the old trouble came back. He had gained 40 pounds in weight. After a while he gave up all other medicines and began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine did him wonderful good. In about two months he was able to walk out in the yard. When he had taken seven bottles he was able to ride out every day and work a little and he had gained 40 pounds in weight. He is now about as well as he ever was and has been at work on his farm. Last fall he sowed his own wheat. This being the first work he had done for four years. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla the most wonderful medicine in the world. NOLAN E. HARRIS, Des Moines, Kentucky.

Orchard Wisdom.

Here are a few short remarks by Prof. Bailey, of the Cornell University, on orchards. Read them and profit thereby:

Orchards are to be made profitable, they must receive as good care as other crops.

Good drainage, natural or artificial, is essential to success. Trees are impatient of wet feet.

Good tillage increases the available food supply of the soil and also conserves its moisture.

Tillage should be begun just as soon as the ground is dry enough in the spring, and should be repeated as often as once in ten days throughout the growing season, which extends from spring until July and August.

Only cultivated crops should be allowed in orchards early in the season. Grain and hay should never be plowed.

Plow hood or cultivated crops may be plowed in trees of moisture and fertility. They are allowed to stand above the roots.

Watch a soil orchard. It will begin to show before you know it.

Probably nine-tenths of the apple orchards are in sod, and many of them are meadows. Of course they are failing.

The remedy for these apple failures is to plow down many of the orchards.

For the remainder, the treatment is cultivation, fertilization, spraying—the quality of orthodox apple growing.

Potash is the chief fertilizer to be applied to fruit trees, particularly to the fruit of bearing.

Potash may be had in wood ashes and in muriate of potash. It is most commonly used in the latter form.

An annual application of potash should be made upon bearing orchards 500 pounds to the acre.

Phosphoric acid is the second important fertilizer to be applied artificially to orchards. Of the plain superphosphates, from 300 to 400 pounds may be applied to the acre.

Nitrogen can be obtained cheapest by means of thorough tillage (to promote nitrification) and nitrogenous green manures.

Barn manures are generally more economically used when applied to farm crops than when applied to orchards; yet they can be used with good results, particularly when rejuvenating the old orchards.

Cultivation may be stopped late in the season, and a crop can then be sown upon the land. This crop may serve as a cover or protection to the soil and as a green manure.

A green manure improves the soil by adding fiber to it and by increasing its fertility.

The crops well adapted to very late sowing are few. Vetches are probably the best which have been well tested. But everything points to crimson clover as the ideal orchard cover and green manure.

The Magic of a Word.

A party of gentlemen had recently returned from a metropolitan city told a new story on the intensely belated. They were stopping at a big hotel, and on the first evening of their visit were playing a military game, but which they believed plain life would amuse. One of them stopped to the bell-pull. It was one of those fangled things built on the principle of a dollar typewriter. You turn the hand around the dial till it points to what you want, then you press the button, and the business is supposed to do the rest. The instrument was caused to register the water a number of times in the regions below, but there was no response. The thirteenth kept on increasing and the gentlemen got hot in the collar. One of them spoke of going down and challenging the clerk and the bellboys to a boxing match.

"No, don't do that," remarked one of the gentlemen. "Just watch me—I'll get 'em."

He cranked over to the bell, yanked the crank around to "champagne" and let it drive. In an incredibly short time there was a knock at the door, and the boy struck his head in.

"Champagne, gentlemen?"

"No, just bring us some plain, everyday common water with ice in it. We want 'em champagne just to catch you napping. Now get a move on you."—Galveston News.

Shore Cargoes Shifted.
"Once in awhile we ship," said Mr. Bozelle, "that the ship So-and-so or the steamer So-and-so has returned to port or has arrived perhaps with a decided list; cargo shifted." Sometimes we see a land craft, a truck, with cargo shifted for their tables. A loaded truck is entirely fresh and absolutely pure.

Even with the cows milked before the door one must continue to watch the milkman, for I have even heard of their having a rubber bag of water concealed under their loose frocks and connected with a rubber tube running down inside of the elevator, the tip being concealed in the hollow of the milking hand. Only a gentle pressure upon the bag of water will be needed to thus cause both milk and water to flow into the cup at the same time. The milk vendors of Italy and India have also learned their lesson and have adopted this practice this identical trick.

A Singular Calculation.
In a recent number of Power's singular calculation is presented by J. A. Remie's figures, the power of a 10,000-horsepower engine about 70,000,000 years to lift the earth a foot in height, and to do this work, allowing 18 pounds of water per horsepower per hour, would require some 10,000,000,000,000 gallons of water, or more than would be displaced in the mouth of the Mississippi in 60,000 years. This would be enough, the writer estimates, to cover the entire surface of the earth to a depth of about 300 feet, to convert which into steam, using good boilers, would require some 4,000,000,000,000 tons of coal, or a quantity of the mineral was loaded on cars of 20 tons each, it would demand 200,000,000,000 such cars. If the cars were 50 feet long and 10 feet wide, together in one train, it would reach around the earth 40,000,000 times and, if running 25 miles per hour, would consume 25,000,000,000 such cars, or the length of itself. So much for "figures."

An Editor's Hard Lot.
There are always those who will kick. For instance, if you publish jokes with whippersnappers, some will say that you ought to be in a lunatic hospital. If you don't print something to smile at, they say you are a pessimistic fossil. If you spread yourself and tell the truth, the original article, they will say it is stolen. If you reprint an article, they say you can't write. If you say a derogatory word for a man, you are paid; if you compliment the women, the men are jealous, and if you don't the verdict of the women is to the effect that your paper is not fit to be in the construction of a bustle. If you stay in your office, you are afraid to remain on the streets; if you do, you are lazy. If you lounge at the park and see a woman, you are a dandy; if you wear good clothes, you are a dandy, and don't pay for them. If you play a social game of any kind and get stuck, you are a dandy, if you win, you are a tin horn, and so it goes through one continual round of pleasant complications.—Rosalyn (Mich.) Sentinel.

A Spook Story.
A Philadelphia policeman the other day received a letter informing him that a "spook" was, by which term an unlicensed sailor is designated, was in operation near Frankfort and the townhouse garden streets. His detective instinct was at once aroused, and he made an investigation, only to discover that he was the victim of some of the most vulgar of the city. The place referred to proved to be an Episcopal church for the deaf.—New York Tribune.

A Military Exquisite.
Marshall Ney, who was as handsome as he was brave, is said never to have appeared on the field at a great battle until he was dressed with scrupulous elegance and his beard carefully curled and combed. When he was led out to execution, he was cool and calm as though he were going to open a dance, only asking that the guns should be aimed low, that his face might not be disfigured after death.

The Swankers.
The Swankers, who live in the fashionable mountain range between the Black and Canadian seas, are probably the laziest people in the world. They have made no advance toward civilization. It is said that they observe the rule to observe holidays four times a week, with pains' days as extra.

A Deadly Gas.

Millers and the owners of grain elevators look upon the possibility of carbon monoxide as one of their most useful agents. When a mill, an elevator or a granary becomes infested with this deadly gas, the most effective thing to exterminate the pest. So deadly is the gas, however, and so rapidly does it act that the utmost care must be taken in applying the bleaching. It is usually sprinkled over the grain from watering pots. The liquid is rapidly converted into a gas, and the latter sinks through the grain, carrying death to the weevil and even to the unattached eggs.

So long as the persons applying the liquid stand above the point of application, they are pretty safe from the fumes, but occasionally the workmen breathe a little of the gas and have to be removed at once to the open air, as the heart is quickly paralyzed by the action of the bleaching. It is usual to treat the lower floors of a granary first, so that those employed in the work may keep constantly above the gas. Any animal, as a cat or dog, shut up in an apartment where the bleaching is being done, its work is found dead when the place is opened.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A Cuban Milkman.
"How many cows there are about the streets!" somebody exclaims, and then he is calmly informed that the morning's milk is simply being delivered. A bunch of cattle and their driver stop before a house, and the porters come with a cup for the morning's supply. It is the same thing as the milk being milked from door to door by the dairymen, for this is the way the Cuban housewives have taken to assure for their tables a lactated supply which is entirely fresh and absolutely pure.

Even with the cows milked before the door one must continue to watch the milkman, for I have even heard of their having a rubber bag of water concealed under their loose frocks and connected with a rubber tube running down inside of the elevator, the tip being concealed in the hollow of the milking hand.
